CASE STUDY

Problem

European distributors faced difficulties accessing affordable aluminium and cotton from Central Asia, combined with unstable supplies of nuts and dried fruits. High logistics costs and long transit times reduced competitiveness.

Results

Delivery times shortened by 30%, while overall logistics and settlement costs dropped significantly. Clients gained direct access to aluminium, cotton and agri-products without intermediaries.

Solution

Lex Futura established a direct supply chain from Uzbekistan and Tajikistan, including railway freight, cold storage for fruits, and optimized customs clearance. Legal and tax structures secured compliance and reduced risks.

Outcome

Stable long-term contracts ensured consistent deliveries, predictable pricing, and a competitive advantage on EU and Middle Eastern markets.
